Complaint

As the host of Manusaya, Netfirms.com had access to Internet Protocol (IP)<sup>2</sup> information and email addresses for all of the users who posted articles or comments on the website.

Thailand's lèse majesté laws, contained in Article 112 of Thailand's Criminal Code, provide in pertinent part: "Whoever defames, insults or threatens the King, Queen, the Heir-apparent or the Regent, shall be punished with imprisonment of three to fifteen years." Lèse majesté laws are enforced by the National Intelligence Agency, the Ministry of Information and Communication Technology, and the Bureau of High Tech Crimes within the Department of Special Investigations ("DSI"). In December 2003, the Information and Communications Technology Ministry set up a Cyber Inspector Team to monitor and ban websites featuring pornography and other content the government determined to be inappropriate, including content subject to lèse majesté laws.

Lèse majesté laws have been enforced with alarming frequency over the past several years. Thai-based media routinely self-censor coverage of the royal family, but the Internet has opened a new forum. Thai authorities have responded by trying to block thousands of websites considered subversive, arguing that protection of the monarchy's reputation is of the utmost importance. Often those charged with lèse

Manusaya is a Thai word that means "human." The tagline for the site, translated into English, was "For Democracy, For Human Rights, in the Land of the Free." A note at the top of the site's home page said (in Thai), "Please note: This website is dedicated to those who fight for full democracy, human rights, in the land of the free. Here, we have no class system, racism, or caste. We are world human beings, world citizens. We are equal. We value equal rights and equal liberty. We oppose all forms of violence and all kinds of terrorism being waged around the world."

majesté offenses are denied bail and remain in prison for several months awaiting trial. Particularly harsh punishments have been delivered by the court in several instances, including a sentence of 18 years' imprisonment.

In the recent United Nations Human Rights Committee General Comment No. 34, the Human Rights Committee specifically expressed concern over lèse majesté laws as a violation of freedom of expression. Lèse majesté provisions directly contradict fundamental principles of international law, including the right to freedom of expression, the right to privacy, and the right to due process. By June 2005, Information, Communication, and Technology (ICT) companies in the United States and elsewhere around the world were well aware of the dangers posed to dissidents in many parts of the world and the consequent obligations those dangers put upon web hosting companies to use due diligence when responding to law enforcement requests for private information that could identify critics and human rights defenders.

On June 6, 2005, at the request of Thai officials, Netfirms.com suspended Manusaya's account and the website was, in effect, shut down. Sometime before May 2006, also at the request of Thai officials, Netfirms.com provided Mr. Chai's

As a direct result of Netfirms.com's actions, Mr. Chai was detained and interrogated twice by Thai government officials – once at the DSI in Thailand and once here in the United States – for allegedly insulting the Thai monarchy in violation of Article 112. As a consequence, Mr. Chai lived in constant fear that if he gave the government officials any reason whatsoever to renew their interest in him, he would become one of the political prisoners whose number grew at an alarming rate as strife between pro- and anti-monarchy factions in Thailand intensified.<sup>7</sup>

On August 25, 2009, Plaintiff was informed by email by a Thai government official that he faces arrest and prosecution for violation of Article 112 of Thailand's Criminal Code if he ever returns to his native country of Thailand where many of his family members still reside and where he owns a home. Prior to this time, Mr. Chai traveled to Thailand approximately three times annually. On August 8, 2011, Plaintiff received notification by mail that there is still an active arrest warrant against him issued by the Thai Criminal Court for "Defamation of the defame, insult, or threaten certain members of the royal family.

- From approximately 2004 through 2005, Manusaya operated on the 12. Internet as a forum where users could post a wide range of articles and comments regarding Thai politics.
- Manusaya was owned and operated by Abdulrosa Basil Jengoh, a 13. Swedish citizen, who maintains no connection to Plaintiff.
- 14. Patrons of Plaintiff's computer store, Computer Station, were permitted to use the store's computers to access the Internet, including the Manusaya website, and anonymously post articles and comments to the site. The website's users, including Plaintiff, would send emails to Manusaya to submit articles or comments to be posted on the site. Plaintiff, his employees, and patrons used two email addresses in the following form: xxxxxxxx@yahoo.com, which belonged Mr. Jack to Chan. Computer a Station employee, or xxxxxx@hotmail.com, which belonged to Plaintiff, to submit articles and comments for posting on Manusaya.
- 15. When articles and comments were posted on Manusaya, they were anonymous. Neither the identity of the author, the email address that was used to submit the article or comment, nor the IP address of the computer were publicly visible on Manusaya.
- 16. Generally, the comments that Plaintiff posted on Manusaya focused on his perception of lèse majesté laws as being unjust.
- 17. Manusaya was hosted by Defendant from March 24, 2004 to June 6, 2005. Defendant shut down Manusaya's account in June 2005 at the request of officials from Thailand.
- 18. In a statement published on a Thai Government website on March 17, 2006, Police Colonel Yanaphon Youngyuen's (hereinafter "Pol. Col. Youngyuen"), the Director of the Bureau of High Tech Crimes, Department of Special Investigation, at that time summarized the Thai Government's investigation related

- 19. Pol. Col. Youngyuen stated further in the announcement, "In order to resist such news as propagated by www.manusaya.com, the three major governmental agencies, namely the National Intelligence Agency, Ministry of Information and Communication Technology, and Department of Special Investigations, have worked together since March 27, 2004 and received cooperation from all the Thai internet service providers and webmasters in Thailand to block such sites deemed lèse majesté to their subscribers."
- 20. Pol. Col. Youngyuen stated further in this statement that as a result of the investigations, four websites were shut down and others agreed to delete offending content. He identified Netfirms.com as the web hosting company of Manusaya, and stated that he received "vital data from Netfirms.com for our expanded investigation."
- 21. Defendant confirmed in writing, by letter to counsel for Plaintiff on December 1, 2009, that Defendant Netfirms.com received a complaint regarding Manusaya from the Thai officials, as a result of which Defendant Netfirms.com decided to suspend Manusaya's account on June 6, 2005.
- 22. At some point between initiating cooperation with the Thai investigators in May 9, 2006, Defendant also provided Thai officials with Plaintiff's IP address and the two associated email addresses.

May 2006 Arrest and Interrogation

23. In May 2006, Plaintiff traveled to Thailand. Plaintiff was initially detained at the Thailand Immigration Desk at the Bangkok airport. The immigration officer stepped away from the desk and went to a nearby office to make a telephone call. He returned approximately ten minutes later, and Plaintiff was permitted to proceed into the country.

- 25. On May 9, 2006, on his way back home to California, while Plaintiff was waiting in the security line at the Bangkok airport, he was approached by approximately 5-7 agents from the DSI who escorted him out of the security line and to an office at the airport.
- 26. Plaintiff was told by the agents that they had a warrant for his arrest for committing an act of lèse majesté. Plaintiff asked to see the alleged warrant, but the agents refused to show it to him.
- 27. In the office at the airport, the agents searched Plaintiff's belongings. They confiscated his personal laptop computer from him. They conducted a pat down search of his body and searched the pockets of his clothing. They removed his wallet and searched through the contents.
- 28. After waiting in the office for approximately one hour, Plaintiff was escorted outside of the airport to an unmarked police car, in which he was transported to the DSI, approximately 45 minutes from the airport. When they arrived at the DSI, Plaintiff was escorted upstairs to Pol. Col. Youngyuen's office. There were approximately ten other people in the office, including a videographer and photographer.
- 29. Upon arriving in Pol. Col. Youngyuen's office, Plaintiff was searched again. He underwent another pat down search of his body. He was finger-printed and photographed.
- 30. Plaintiff was interrogated from approximately 7:10 p.m. on May 9, 2006 until 3:30 a.m. on May 10, 2006 and from 8:00 a.m. on May 10, 2006 until approximately 4:50 p.m. when he was finally released from the DSI. Pol. Col. Youngyuen was in charge of the interrogation. The videographer appeared to be recording much of the interrogation.

- At the onset of the interrogation, Plaintiff requested that he be provided with an attorney. Eventually, someone who presented herself as his appointed attorney arrived and told Plaintiff that he needed to cooperate fully and answer all the questions he was asked. She sat silently through the interrogation and did not provide any legal advice to Plaintiff.
- 32. Plaintiff also requested that he be permitted to contact the U.S. Embassy, but the DSI officers denied his request saying that it was too late in the night for him to reach anyone at the embassy.
- 33. During the interrogation, Plaintiff was subjected severe psychological and physical stress. The DSI officers deprived him of food, water, and sleep until 3:30 a.m. on May 10, 2006. At that time, he was taken to a motel where he was told he could rest, but DSI guards remained in the room with him at all times. He was permitted to eat breakfast at approximately 7:30 a.m. at the motel, and then he was taken back to the DSI for further interrogation.
- The DSI officers threatened violence against Plaintiff's family. One of 34. the DSI officers mentioned certain members of Plaintiff's family by name and stated to Plaintiff, "I know where your relatives live in Bangkok and California. If you want them to live in peace, you must cooperate." The officer specifically mentioned the names of Plaintiff's three daughters and his son and indicated that he knew where they lived.
- 35. Plaintiff was extremely frightened during the course of the interrogation. He decided that he had no choice but to cooperate fully and answer every question that was asked of him in order to avoid being harmed.
- During the interrogation, Pol. Col. Youngyuen accused Plaintiff of committing an act of lèse majesté by posting articles and comments on Manusaya. Pol. Col. Youngyuen did not provide Plaintiff with a copy of the posts or any details about the contents.

- DSI officers retrieved Plaintiff's confiscated laptop during the 37. interrogation. They forced Plaintiff to provide his access passwords, and copied electronic files containing personal information including his bank account and personal property information. The officers forced him to provide them with all of his email addresses and passwords.
- The DSI officers made photocopies of all of the documents in 38. Plaintiff's possession, including his U.S. passport. Plaintiff had a small notebook in his possession where he kept personal notations, e.g., reminders, phone numbers, bank account numbers, etc. The officers photocopied every page of the passport and the notebook.
- During the interrogation, at approximately 12:00 a.m. on May 2, 2006, 39. Pol. Col. Youngyuen provided the Plaintiff with a document that had Defendant's name and logo at the top. Plaintiff was permitted to look at the document for approximately one minute. The document appeared to Plaintiff to be a print-out from a computer. The document contained a list of email addresses and their associated IP addresses.
- One of the email addresses in the document was Plaintiff's. Next to 40. his email address, xxxxxx@hotmail.com,9 there was his IP address. Plaintiff also saw the email address of his employee, Jack Chan. The email address was xxxxxxxx@yahoo.com. That email address had the same IP address as Plaintiff's.
- 41. An IP address can easily be used to locate the physical presence of the computer associated with the IP address. Only one computer is associated with a particular IP address.
- At the end of the interrogation, DSI Officers forced Plaintiff to write a 42. statement admitting that he violated Thailand's lèse majesté laws and he would never do it again. The statement also included words of praise and apology to the

- 43. Plaintiff was forced to write two versions of this statement - one in Thai and one in English. He was not provided with copies of the handwritten statements.
- 44. Plaintiff was finally released from the DSI at approximately 5:00 p.m. on May 10, 2006. He took a cab from the DSI to his condominium in Bangkok. He was extremely upset and shaken when he returned to his condominium and immediately contacted his family members in California, including his ailing mother, to tell them what had happened to him. During these phone calls to the U.S., Plaintiff heard periodic clicking sounds and beeping noises which led him to believe that his phone calls were being monitored.
- As a result of the interrogation and detention, the Plaintiff missed his 45. initial flight to the United States. He re-booked a new flight at his own expense the following day and returned to his home in Long Beach, California.
- In the days after Plaintiff returned home to California, he was 46. contacted by email by Pol. Col. Youngyuen who asked Plaintiff to send him copies of any pro-democracy or anti-monarchy materials that he had in his possession.
- Because he wanted to appear as if he was continuing to cooperate with 47. the investigation, Plaintiff scanned some pro-democracy booklets and documents that he had in his possession and emailed them to Pol. Col. Youngyuen. Plaintiff asked by email when the investigation would be closed, but Pol. Col. Youngyuen did not provide him with a response.

Demand for Additional Interrogation in July 2006

48. In July 2006, Pol. Col. Youngyuen traveled to the United States to attend a training course for foreign police and military officers offered by the United States Information Agency in Washington, D.C. On his return back to Thailand, Pol. Col. Youngyuen had a brief stop between flights in Los Angeles International Airport ("LAX"). He contacted Plaintiff when he was still in Washington, D.C. and asked Plaintiff to meet him at LAX.

- Because Plaintiff continued to want to appear cooperative with the 49. investigation, he agreed to meet Pol. Col. Youngyuen at LAX.
- During the telephone conversation, Pol. Col. Youngyuen told Plaintiff that he would like Plaintiff to bring iPods or some other similar items of value home for his children.
- Plaintiff and Pol. Col. Youngyuen met for approximately thirty 51. minutes at a McDonald's restaurant at LAX.
- Plaintiff did not bring iPods to the meeting. He brought local Thai 52. newspapers that he thought Pol. Col. Youngyuen could read on the flight back to Pol. Col. Youngyuen made it clear to Plaintiff that he was very Thailand. disappointed that he did not bring any gifts of value.
- During the meeting, Plaintiff asked Pol. Col Youngyuen if the 53. investigation was still ongoing, and Pol. Col. Youngyuen confirmed that it was.
- Plaintiff asked Pol. Col. Youngyuen when his laptop computer would 54. be returned to him. Pol. Col. Youngyuen responded that it would not be returned to Plaintiff while the investigation was still pending.
- Subsequently, Pol. Col. Youngyuen contacted the Plaintiff via letters 55. on August 8, 2006 and September 11, 2006, requesting that he return to Thailand immediately for further questioning in regards to the lèse majesté allegations.
- In the letter dated August 8, 2006, Pol. Col. Youngyuen wrote, "the 56. time has come for you to officially surrender yourself to the investigators of this case ... you are required to surrender to our bureau on August 24, 2006 at 10:00 AM..."
- Plaintiff responded to the letter by email and said that he was unable to 57. report to the bureau on that date because he had another obligation. He was extremely frightened and believed that he would be arrested and imprisoned if he returned to Thailand.

November 2-3, 2006 Interrogations

- 59. After these letters, Pol. Col. Youngyuen continued to persist in attempting to further interrogate Plaintiff by contacting him via email and requesting that he return to Thailand for more questioning. However, Plaintiff refused to return to Thailand for fear of being arrested and imprisoned.
- 60. Plaintiff finally agreed to meet with Thai law enforcement officials in Southern California. Plaintiff believed that if he cooperated with the officials, they would finally conclude the investigation and that he would not be charged with violating lèse majesté laws. He hoped that it would be safer for him to be interrogated in the U.S. than for him to return to Thailand where he could be arrested and imprisoned.
- 61. The interrogations occurred from 10:30 a.m. 12:45 p.m. on November 2, 2006 and from 10:30 a.m. 2:30 p.m. on November 3, 2006 at a hotel room in the Magic Castle Hotel in Hollywood, California.
- 62. At this interrogation, Plaintiff brought three witnesses, out of fear for his safety and to attest to his credibility.
- 63. On behalf of the Thai government, Pol. Col. Youngyuen was present, as well as Public Prosecutor Viched Musikaransee, and Palace Representative Joe Kashemsant.
- 64. At the onset of the interrogation, Mr. Kashemsant gave Plaintiff several tokens of the monarchy as "gifts": an official royal yellow shirt with a royal insignia on the pocket, a Video CD and a DVD regarding the royal family, a book celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Thai King's accession to the throne, and two CDs of royal music.
  - 65. During the interrogation, the Thai authorities reviewed the documents that Plaintiff had scanned and emailed to them shortly after he had returned home to California in July 2006.

- At the end of the interrogation on November 2, 2006, Pol. Col. 66. Youngyuen assured Plaintiff that he could travel to Thailand without fear of being arrested and prosecuted. Plaintiff requested this assurance in writing, but his request was denied. The interrogation concluded at approximately 12:45 p.m.
- 67. Plaintiff was asked to return the subsequent day for further interrogation. He continued to believe that if he participated in this interrogation, the investigation would ultimately be concluded and he would not be charged with any crime. Accordingly, he returned to the same hotel room on the morning of November 3, 2006.
- During the second day of interrogation, which began at approximately 10:30 a.m., Plaintiff was asked about his other business ventures apart from Computer Station. Plaintiff stated that he also had real estate and U.S. stock investments.
- Plaintiff was asked by the Thai government officials who else had 69. access to his email accounts. Plaintiff stated that xxxxxx@hotmail.com and xxxxxxxx@yahoo.com were business email accounts that Mr. Jack Chan had access to and would use when Plaintiff was out of town or unable to personally respond to emails.
- Pol. Col. Youngyuen told Plaintiff that without his continued 70. cooperation in the investigation, they would be unable to close the case.

- 72. Pol. Col. Youngyuen told Plaintiff that he would complete his investigation and forward his report to the prosecutor's office. Mr. Musikaransee and the prosecution team would then review the report and make a determination as to whether Plaintiff should be prosecuted.

- 73. Pol. Col. Youngyuen stated again that Plaintiff was free to enter and leave Thailand at any time without fear of being arrested or prosecuted.
- 74. The interrogation ended at approximately 2:30 p.m. on November 3, 2006.

Escalating Unrest in Thailand and Prosecutions for Lèse Majesté

- 75. In September 2006, a military coup in Thailand overthrew the elected government and repealed that nation's constitution. This set off a series of internal political struggles between the monarchy and its supporters and those who supported a fully elected constitutional government.
- 76. Protesters occupied a main government building from late August until early December 2008, blockaded parliament in October 2008, and occupied and forced the closure of Bangkok's airports for several days in the end of 2008.
- 77. In 2009, protests disrupted a major Asian summit and caused riots in Bangkok. These protests continued to smolder until Spring 2010, when demonstrators occupied main areas in Bangkok, effectively shutting down the commercial and governmental centers of the city.
- 78. As a result of the standoffs, major buildings were burned, and according to reports, ninety-two people were killed, and over 1,800 were injured.
- 79. As the political pressure on the Thai monarchy increased, so had the enforcement of lèse majesté laws and the penalties for violations.<sup>10</sup>
- 80. Often those charged with lèse majesté offenses are denied bail and remain in prison for several months awaiting trial. In a number of cases, these trials

- 81. Particularly harsh punishments have been delivered by the court in several instances, such as the cases of Darunee Charnchoensilpakul, who was sentenced to 18 years' imprisonment, and Tanthawut Taweewarodomkul, who received a 13-year prison term.<sup>12</sup>
- This political unrest in Thailand made it impossible for Plaintiff to 82. conduct an investigation that would reveal exactly who was involved with the disclosure of his identity and/or anonymous writings to the Thai government, or the circumstances under which they had done so. The turmoil and violence in Thailand made an inquiry very difficult logistically. In addition, given that the Thai government had already identified Plaintiff as a suspect for exactly such offenses, and those officials, who had been able to move freely within the United States, obviously knew how to reach and monitor Plaintiff and his family members, Plaintiff lived in fear of reprisal. Any direct inquiries to the government itself or to the same actors who may have disclosed his identity in the first place could have had extremely dangerous consequences for Plaintiff and his family. Rather than risk becoming one of the political prisoners whose number grew at an alarming rate as strife between pro- and anti-monarchy factions in Thailand intensified, Plaintiff could only research the individuals and corporations who might have been involved in discreet ways so as not to raise the suspicions of the Thai government.

Lèse Majesté Charge and Inability to Return to Thailand

83. On August 25, 2009, Palace Representative Joe Kashemsant alerted Plaintiff by email that he had been charged with lèse majesté in a Thai national court, and that he would be arrested if he returned to Thailand.

- 85. Since learning of the pending criminal charges on August 25, 2009, Plaintiff has sought to uncover the means by which the Thai government identified him and connected him with the alleged acts. In doing so, Plaintiff, through his counsel, has made inquiries with government agencies, officials, individuals, and companies that might have held personal information connecting him or his store's computer with writings on Manusaya.
- 86. By letter to counsel for Plaintiff on December 1, 2009, Defendant Netfirms.com confirmed that it received a complaint regarding Manusaya from the Thai officials, as a result of which Defendant decided to suspend Manusaya's account on June 6, 2005.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF: NEGLIGENCE Cal. Civ. Code § 1714(a)

- 87. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 1 through 86 as if set forth fully herein.
- 88. At a time prior to May 9, 2006, Defendant negligently disclosed to Thai law enforcement officials Plaintiff's identifying and confidential information entrusted in its possession.
- 89. Defendant negligently disclosed Plaintiff's identifying and confidential information to Thai law enforcement officials without regard for the requirements set forth in the Treaty with Thailand on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters and contrary to data privacy, First Amendment, PIPEDA, and industry standards.
  - 90. By the time of Defendant's disclosure of Mr. Chai's identifying and

- 91. It was reasonably foreseeable that disclosure of Plaintiff's identifying and confidential information to government officials from Thailand, a country known for overbroad and politically motivated enforcement of its lèse majesté laws in violation of the right to freedom of expression, the right to privacy, and the right to due process, would result in harm to Plaintiff.
- 92. Defendant owed a duty to its account holders, as provided for in its term of service agreement, not to provide their personal information to any law enforcement authorities or legal agents without a proper court order, subpoena or warrant.
- 93. It is reasonably foreseeable that if Defendant owed this duty to its account holders, it also had a duty to protect the confidentiality of personal identifying information with which it was entrusted by users of its account holders.
- 94. Defendant breached its duty to the Plaintiff by negligently engaging in the conduct described herein.
- 95. But for the actions of Defendant, Plaintiff would not have suffered any injury as a result of his anonymous postings on Manusaya advocating for democracy in Thailand and abolition of Thailand's lèse majesté laws.
- 96. As a direct and proximate result of the actions of Defendant Netfirms.com, Plaintiff has been deprived of his liberty and freedom within his

These rights are expressed in a number of international instruments including but not limited to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights Articles 17 and 19, the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights Article 1, and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination Article 5.

native country of Thailand; specifically the Plaintiff cannot safely travel to, reside in, or visit with friends and family in Thailand without facing inevitable arrest and prosecution for violation of lèse majesté laws.

- Plaintiff has suffered severe psychological distress as a direct and 97. proximate result of Defendant's actions. He was detained at the airport in Bangkok, taken to the DSI, harshly interrogated and threatened, deprived of food and water, and kept overnight. He was subsequently interrogated again over the course of two days in the United States. Finally, he was notified that he would be arrested and charged with lèse majesté if he ever returns to his native country of Thailand. All of these events were extremely psychologically damaging to Plaintiff.
- As a direct and proximate result of Defendant's actions, Plaintiff suffered financial losses. As a result of being interrogated at the DSI in Bangkok, he missed his return flight to the United States and was forced to purchase a new ticket at his own expense. During the interrogation by the DSI officials, Plaintiff's laptop computer was confiscated and never returned to him. He was also forced to replace his laptop computer at his own expense. Additionally, he has been unable to enjoy his Bangkok condominium, and he felt that he needed to short sell his Thai stocks when he was notified that he would be arrested and charged with lèse majesté if he ever returns to Thailand.
- 99. Defendant's negligent conduct constitutes reckless disregard for the rights and safety of Plaintiff. Defendant's conduct comes within the definition of malicious acts punishable by the assessment of punitive damages because Defendant provided Plaintiff's confidential identifying information to Thai officials when Defendant knew, or should have known, that it was highly probable that Defendant's actions would place Plaintiff's safety at risk and cause harm to Plaintiff.
- The Plaintiff is entitled to recover any and all other damages available to him which total amount of damages exceeds $75,000, in an amount to be proven at trial.

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF: VIOLATION OF THE CALIFORNIA BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE, §17200, et seq.

- 101. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 1 through 100 as if set forth fully herein.
- 102. Plaintiff brings this cause of action pursuant to California Business and Professions Code § 17200. Defendant's conduct as alleged herein has been and continues to be deleterious to Plaintiff.
- 103. The California Business and Professions Code § 17200, et seq. prohibits "unfair competition," defined as any "unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice." These acts or practices consist of those forbidden by law.
- 104. Defendant violated California Business and Professions Code § 17200 by engaging in unlawful business practices through the dissemination of Plaintiff's confidential and identifying information in violation of California law, federal law, including 15 USC, § 45, et seq. (Deceptive Practices Act), Canadian law, including PIPEDA, international law, including Articles 3 and 4 of the Treaty with Thailand on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters, and their own company policies, including the Service Agreement and the Privacy Policy.
- 105. The unlawful, unfair, and fraudulent business acts and practices described herein constitute ongoing and continuous unfair business practices within the meaning of California Business and Professions Code § 17200 et seq., and are prohibited by the laws of the state of California, the laws of Canada, and international law.
- 106. Defendant's practices described herein offend established public policies and involve business practices that are immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous and/or substantially injurious to customers.
- 107. Such practices include, but are not limited to, the unwarranted intrusion into and provision of Internet users' private electronic communication

108. Plaintiff seeks injunctive relief, disgorgement of all profits resulting from these unfair business practices, restitution and other appropriate relief as provided in Business and Professions Code § 17203.

THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF: VIOLATION OF CONSTITUTIONAL PRIVACY RIGHTS

- 109. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates by reference each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 1 through 108 as if set forth fully herein.
- 110. Plaintiff, under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, Article I, Section I of the California Constitution and/or the common law, maintains a legally protected privacy interest in the personal information he provided to Manusaya and that was entrusted to Defendant.
- 111. Plaintiff, pursuant to the First Amendment, Article I, Section I of the California Constitution, and the common law had a reasonable expectation that the personal information he supplied to Manusaya, which was entrusted to Defendant, would not be disclosed to any third party without his prior consent or, at the very least, without prior notice to him.
- 112. Defendant's unauthorized disclosure of Plaintiff's personal information to a foreign country with a record of suppressing the right to free speech without warning or notice to Plaintiff and without regard to Defendant's legal obligation to maintain such information in confidence constitutes a serious invasion of Plaintiff's privacy interests as defined by Art. 1, § 1 of the California Constitution.
- 113. Defendant's disclosure of Plaintiff's personally identifiable information, without prior notice, to Thai officials is offensive and objectionable to

- 114. Plaintiff has suffered damages, including but not limited to emotional distress and financial losses described above, that were proximately caused by Defendant's violation of Plaintiff's constitutional rights. Plaintiff is also entitled to an award of attorneys' fees pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5.
- 115. Defendant's violation of Plaintiff's privacy rights was willful. Plaintiff acted with oppression, fraud and/or malice in disclosing Plaintiff's personal information without his consent, and without prior notice, such that Plaintiff is entitled to an award of punitive damages.
- 116. Plaintiff alleges on information and belief that Defendant's practice of disclosing personal information without consent, notice, or legal justification is widespread and that the privacy interest of many individuals has been violated as a result of Defendant's practices. These practices are likely to continue unless and until they are restrained by an injunction requiring, at a minimum, that Defendant notify its account holders prior to releasing personal information of its account holders or the personal information of the users of its account holders' websites.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff respectfully requests the following relief:

- A. Compensatory damages in an amount exceeding $75,000, or such other sum as may be proven at trial;
  - B. Restitution;
  - C. Punitive damages;
- D. Attorney's fees and costs of the suit incurred herein to the extent allowed by law;
- E. A permanent injunction prohibiting the release of private information without specific and prior notice to Defendant's personal or corporate account holders and to users of the account holders' websites;
